

Scott, Woodside To Quit Race If Choice Is Okayed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sen. Hugh Scott and Judge Robert E. Woodside of the state Superior Court, have agreed to withdraw from the race for Republican nomination for governor if a compromise candidate acceptable to them can be found.

But after a secret meeting in Philadelphia Saturday there were indications the two leading contenders hadn't come close to agreeing on such a candidate.

After the meeting at a motel on the city's outskirts, George I. Bloom, state chairman, issued a statement saying:

"We met and discussed candidates for governor, but came to no conclusions. But Judge Woodside and Sen. Scott indicated a willingness to withdraw under certain circumstances."

He would not elaborate. Neither would the candidates or any others at the meeting, saying they pledged themselves to silence.

Informed sources in Harrisburg said, however, that each offered three compromise candidates and agreed to withdraw if one of those was selected.

These sources said Scott's choices were Rep. William W. Scranton, former President Eisenhower and Thomas E. Gates, former secretary of defense under Eisenhower.

Eisenhower and Gates, however, are reported to have no interest in the nomination. Sources said Scott, therefore, actually has fallen back on Scranton as his only compromise candidate.

But Frank Hilton, Woodside's campaign manager, in Harrisburg, said that Scranton was not acceptable. He said that so far as Woodside is concerned, "Scranton and Scott are the same person."

The Harrisburg sources said Woodside's compromise choices were Judge G. Harold Watkins, also of the state Superior Court; William S. Livengood, a four-time secretary of internal affairs; and Rep. James E. Van Zandt.

Woodside has the apparent backing of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association.

Main Reason
Scott, who said he entered the race primarily to block Woodside, is supported by Eisenhower and the state finance committee.

The committee opposes Woodside, saying it could not raise funds for his campaign. The finance committee said Woodside lacks aggressiveness.

Van Zandt is now a candidate for the senatorial nomination after announcing and then withdrawing as a candidate for governor, Sunday Dr. Robert L. Johnson, Pennsylvania's national Republican committeeman, wired Van Zandt that Scott considered him, Van Zandt, unacceptable as a compromise candidate.

Scott had once supported Van Zandt for the gubernatorial nomination, but withdrew his support when the congressman said he would campaign with Woodside.

Sends Telegram
In his telegram to Van Zandt, Dr. Johnson said he had conferred with Scott and that Scott, "told me he will not withdraw as a candidate for governor in your favor."

Dr. Johnson, who also heads the Republican Alliance, said he thought it was his responsibility as national committeeman "to pass on this information to you so that you will not be misled by others into thinking that you would be considered a so-called compromise candidate." Johnson said Scott plans to clarify his position tomorrow.

Newsman Says He Saw Castro Alive

HAVANA (AP) — A foreign newsman said Sunday he spotted Fidel Castro — who disappeared from public view two weeks ago — in downtown Havana Saturday night.

Castro's disappearance unleashed a flood of rumors that had him either dead, suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound or a captive of top Cuban Communists.

Alan Oxley, a British freelance reporter and photographer, told a reporter he saw Castro driving in his official car down Seaside Avenue in the harbor area and that he followed the prime minister. Castro stopped in front of the Armed Forces Ministry and entered the building, Oxley said.

Oxley, who then left the area, said he and another British journalist, Peter Donat, were arrested later by police after filming part of a carnival parade in Havana. Oxley, released Sunday morning, said the arrest had no connection with the Castro episode.

Oxley, 27, has lived in Havana nearly three years. He estimated he has been jailed 19 times by Castro agents.

Castro's last public appearance was the night of Feb. 12 when he attended the opening show of the national circus here.

He was accompanied by visiting Brazilian peasant leader, Francisco Juliao, an outspoken admirer of Castro.

Castro had been scheduled to attend the opening of a series of adult education courses here last Friday. He failed to show up for the ceremony at the Havana Sports Arena, despite assertions by a TV commentator that Castro would attend, "thus dispelling false stories circulating about him."

Refuses To Say
The governor has refused repeatedly to publicly commit himself as to his favorite in the boiling Democratic pot.

Lawrence is said to control 38 of the 72 policy committee votes, thus making it impossible for a candidate to be endorsed without his support.

The issue has been at a standstill because U.S. Rep. William J. Green remained adamant in his opposition to Dilworth.

It has been speculated in Capitol Hill circles that should the policy committee support Dilworth, Green may join forces with Allegheny County Commissioner William D. McClelland.

McClelland, who has been frequently at odds with Lawrence, said last week he would seek the nomination if Dilworth is endorsed. Green, thus far, has not publicized his choice to oppose Dilworth.

Wants Lower Level Talks First

Kennedy Still Rejects Bid For Geneva Summit Talk

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President Kennedy still rejects Soviet Premier Khrushchev's bid to open the Geneva disarmament conference at the summit level but offers such a meeting by June 1—if worthwhile progress is made at lower levels.

This was disclosed Sunday in the text of a note the President sent to the Soviet leader Saturday. In it Kennedy said it would be going at things backwards to have heads of government start the 15-nation Geneva sessions which begin March 14.

Firmly Rejected
Kennedy firmly rejected Khrushchev's suggestion that U.S. resumption of nuclear testing in the air would be an aggressive act.

But he credited the Russian with sincerity in his moves for a summit session—which was a sort of coals-of-fire touch since Khrushchev's latest note implied Kennedy is insincere in his approach and already convinced the Geneva meeting will fail.

Khrushchev twice has called for the heads of all the 15 governments to start the discussions and twice the United States and Great Britain have rejected the request.

Once again Kennedy insisted that the discussions should begin among foreign ministers. But he expressed hope that "developments in the conference and internationally would make it useful to arrange for the personal participation of the heads of government before June 1."

The Geneva session is being convened at the request of the United Nations and is to report to that organization by June 1.

Expects Echo
In a message which Britain is expected to echo, Kennedy in large measure reaffirmed the stand the two Western powers have taken consistently. The latest Khrushchev summit bid was rejected informally last week soon after it was received and the 1,000-word note released Sunday contained no surprises.

This second turnaround of Khrushchev's summit plans leaves it uncertain whether the Soviet leader will go to Geneva even if the Western leaders do not.

The Kennedy document, a reply to a 2,500-word message received Thursday from Khrushchev, was less truculent in tone than the Soviet premier's.

But Kennedy did object that Khrushchev had seemed to challenge the motives of himself and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain. And he said, "It is not true, as you allege, that the United States is seeking to establish complete control over national armaments from the beginning of the disarmament process."

The chief executive brought up again the problem of nuclear testing and said it was strange that the Soviet Union, which first broke the truce on atmospheric tests, now is characterizing any resumption of such tests by the United States, as an aggressive act.

Into Context
"It was resumption of testing by the Soviet Union," Kennedy said, "which put this issue back into the context of the arms race and that consequently forced the United States to prepare to take such steps as may be necessary to insure its own security."

Consideration of the message was part of the official business that Kennedy mixed with pleasure and outings on a long weekend in Florida.

There was another item or two of business.

For one thing, he made the initial appointments, twelve of them to a presidential committee on the National Medal of Science. The medal is to provide recognition for persons who make outstanding contributions in sciences.

Dr. Frederick Seitz, chairman of the physics department of the University of Illinois at Urbana, was named committee chairman.

U.S. Capital Plans Huge Greeting For Col. Glenn

BEAUTY IN HAZARDS—While much of the Pocono Mountains was ice covered Saturday and cold winds whipped across the land, a scenic beauty was created. The snow (from a previous storm) and ice-coated branches (from Friday's freezing rain) painted this picture near Tannersville.

Rain Expected

250,000 Are Expected To View Tribute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bands will play, cheers will ring and oratory will flow Monday for the first American to orbit the earth—although occasional rain may fall during the celebration.

While the capital polished last-minute plans for Monday's roaring tribute to astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., officials closely watched the weather forecasts.

There had been a possibility of wet snow or rain but in a late afternoon forecast the weather bureau indicated that only occasional rain might fall. Cloudy, chilly, 40-plus weather appears assured for the parade, the bureau said, adding that there may be rather lengthy periods when the rain is very light or even none at all.

But nothing short of a blizzard or cloudburst—either at all probable—would be likely to cut into the crowd of 250,000 expected to jam the sides of the mile-long parade route from the White House to the Capitol. This is the familiar trail of the presidential inaugural parades but is being run in reverse this time.

An idea of the enthusiasm has been borne home to Edgar Morris, chairman of the Citizens Committee for Visiting Dignitaries, who reported: "If we had time we could make this parade as big as an inaugural."

He explained that he has been flooded by calls for organizations wanting to join in the triumphal procession for the 40-year-old Marine lieutenant colonel who flashed three times around the world last Tuesday. But they can't be accommodated.

To Fly There

Glenn and his family are to fly in Monday from West Palm Beach, Fla., with President Kennedy, arriving at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland between 11:30 and 11:40 a.m. EST. After brief but colorful ceremonies there, helicopters will take the party to the White House.

The traditional key-to-the-city presentation will take place quickly there. The parade is to start at 12:05, reaching the Capitol at 1 p.m. There Glenn will address a joint session of Congress in the House chamber—an honor seldom extended except to visiting chiefs of state or heads of government.

From the Capitol, Glenn goes to a private luncheon with capital dignitaries at the State Department.

All of the day's public activities are to be covered live by the three television and four radio networks.

Actually, the parade itself will be a short and simple one, as Washington parades go. City and mounted park police will head it, followed by the Marine Corps band, a color guard, marching detachments of all the armed services and then the official party led by the automobile bearing Glenn.

Although the procession itself will have only one marching band, the occasion will not lack for music to compete with the screaming thousands.

Menon Battles For Seat In India Voting

By ALAN M. KENNEDY

BOMBAY, India (AP)—India's third general election—biggest in the non-Communist world—ended Sunday with interest focused on the hotly contested re-election bid of controversial Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon.

Half the nation's 210 million eligible voters are estimated to have participated in the 10 days of voting to choose a new Parliament and fill more than 2,900 seats in 13 state legislatures.

Menon backers claimed the left firebrand took a strong early lead over his chief opponent in the North Bombay parliamentary race, J. B. Kripalani, 74.

Prime Minister Nehru put his own prestige behind Menon in a campaign in which Menon was accused by opponents of being pro-Communist.

Nationwide results of what was considered a generally peaceful campaign—only nine deaths were reported in interparty clashes—probably will be known Thursday. A few snowbound Himalayan areas will vote later.

Nehru's mammoth Congress party, in power since India gained independence in 1947, is in no danger of losing its majority grip on Parliament. The big question is the victory margin and the showings of opposition parties.

Returns from 151 state legislative contests gave the Congress Party 68 seats. But it lost 31 seats taken in the last general election and gained only 8 of those which opposition parties had won five years ago.

Republicans May Oppose Adjournment

HARRISBURG (AP)—House Republicans will be asked Monday to oppose final adjournment of the legislature, which has been tentatively set for Wednesday.

Minority Leader Albert W. Johnson said he would ask his caucus to "go against sine die (adjournment without date)" when the GOP gathers before the chamber resumes its business.

However, Senate Minority Leader James S. Berger said he did not expect this membership to oppose the Wednesday windup.

Johnson said he was opposed to the adjournment because he wanted to give his members "a chance to vote against sine die as an expression on school aid."

He was referring to a $9.1 million school subsidy measure which the legislature approved last week.

Would Veto

Gov. Lawrence has indicated several times he would veto the effort on the grounds it would unbalance his budget.

Johnson would like the general assembly to remain in session in order to attempt to override any veto. It would take a two-thirds vote in each chamber. Berger said that "as a practical matter, we can't get the two-thirds vote to override the governor."

Each chamber now is confronted with the business of cleaning up loose ends in a drive to end the 1962 session Wednesday.

The major business pending is the "Project 70" legislation: A constitutional amendment authorizing the state to borrow $70 million in order to acquire land for parks, conservation and recreation purposes by the end of this decade.

Johnson said some of his members would like to broaden the amendment to specify that the money also be used to develop the land.

The GOP members also are considering revising the amendment to permit the state to acquire such things as mineral rights rather than just surface title in buying land.

The "Project 70" legislation has passed the Senate. It will take the House, under parliamentary procedures it follows, at least three days to concur. That is the reason for putting off final adjournment until Wednesday.

The House also could object to certain small increases made in the budget by the Senate. The Senate approved the increases after the House passed the more than 70 bills involved in the 1962 spending proposals. In this case a joint House-Senate committee would be formed to work out a compromise.

113 Districts Objected Hike In Real Estate

HARRISBURG (AP)—Only 113 of the state's 235 school districts have objected to their increased real estate values which, in turn, will result in lower school subsidies.

The Sunbury Daily Item, quoting a spokesman for the Tax Equalization Board in Harrisburg, reported that the objectors represented approximately 4 per cent of the existing districts.

The query was made in connection with a legislative attempt to provide about $9.1 million in subsidy distribution to districts which are faced with a loss because of their higher real estate values.

According to the state school subsidy formula, the higher a district's real estate values, the lower its subsidy payments. The Tax Equalization Board is the agency responsible for determining the market valuations of real property.

22 Perish In Venezuelan Air Disaster

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—A Venezuelan airliner crashed into a cloud-covered mountain while making a landing approach on the resort island of Margarita Sunday. Airline officials said all 22 persons aboard perished.

Reports of offshore fishermen said they saw the two-engine F27 turbo-prop plane of Avensa Airlines burst into flames after it crashed.

All 19 passengers and 3 crew members were reported to be Venezuelans.

Margarita Island is in the Caribbean Sea about 15 miles north of the peninsula of Araya on Venezuela's east coast and about 165 miles east northeast of Caracas.

Reports from the island said the plane crashed about three miles from the landing field at the principal resort city of Porlamar. Weather at the time was bad, the reports said.

Says Dr. Pauling

Air Tests Could Claim 4 Million

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Linus Pauling, American Nobel Prize-winning chemist, said Sunday recent Soviet atomic testing in the atmosphere eventually will claim more than four million victims throughout the world.

"That is the meaning of the Soviet resumption of tests. It compares with the consignment of Jews to the gas chambers," he said in a statement read to 5,000 persons at a ban-the-bomb rally in Trafalgar Square. Pauling was not present.

"My government and the British government will now resume tests," his statement went on. "This is premeditated murder of millions of people."

The statement by Pauling, professor of chemistry at the California Institute of Technology, said the Soviet tests mean 160,000 children will be born with gross physical and mental defects in the next few generations.

"The carbon 14 produced will cause an estimated total of four million stillbirths, embryonic, neonatal or childhood deaths and viable children with physical and mental defects. These four million victims will be spread out over some score of generations."

UCC In Phila. Backs Bible Rule

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A recent federal court decision banning Bible reading in Pennsylvania schools has the support of the Philadelphia synod of the United Church of Christ.

A letter to pastors released Saturday and signed by the Rev. Wilmer H. Long, synod president, said: "It is our conviction that in the nature of our American pluralistic, democratic society, the court could not fairly decide otherwise."

Pennsylvania's amended law requiring Bible reading, except for children excused by their parents, was declared unconstitutional by a three-judge court on Feb. 1.

Some Accept, Others Reject Bob Kennedy's World Tour

Robert F. Kennedy entered the home stretch of his world goodwill tour Sunday to applause from non-Communist nations he visited and jeers from the Communist world.

While Republican critics at home expressed belief the attorney general was meddling in foreign policy, most foreign leaders seemed to accept President Kennedy's brother as a spokesman for official policy.

Newspapers in West Berlin — where young Kennedy scored his most impressive triumph by declaring the United States will fight if the city is attacked—had some comments on this subject.

"Even if some U.S. career diplomats regard the activities of President Kennedy's brother with skepticism," said Der Tag, "there can be no doubt that all Americans agree that this brotherly diplomacy can substantially determine the American policies of tomorrow."

Closest Admirer

And West Berlin's Telegram declared: "Everyone knows that Robert Kennedy not only is the attorney general but also is one of his brother's closest advisers. This fact lends special weight to what he said in Berlin."

Kennedy's tour got off well at the first stop, Japan. Big crowds turned out, and although he was heckled by leftist students and jeered by a leftist crowd there were no serious incidents.

One influential Japanese newspaper said Kennedy demonstrated "a new diplomatic goodwill technique more effective than printing one million propaganda pamphlets."

Nationalist Chinese newspapers on Formosa were miffed because he paused only briefly there en route to his most difficult stop, neutralist Indonesia.

Indonesian students showed anger because the United States would not side with Indonesia in its dispute over West New Guinea with the Netherlands, a U.S. ally in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Using some of his bluntest language on the tour, Kennedy warned Indonesians the United States would never be blackmailed and told heckling students: "You may disagree with us, but this doesn't mean to say you can't join the United States to go to hell."

Kennedy had long conferences with President Sukarno, emphasizing U.S. desire for a peaceful solution with the Dutch. Later, Foreign Minister Subandrio said talks were fruitful but nothing definite could be expected from them since Kennedy did not come as a negotiator.

He called Stroudsburg Police.

They arrived to find Edward J. Golanek, 42, of Nan , attempting to break into the tavern. He was arrested on a charge attempted burglary and possession of burglary tools.

NOW WITHOUT A MOTHER—Two young bear cubs were recently found in Pike County after their mother was driven from the den by a pack of dogs. District Game Protector Albert Kriefski, Pike County, right, shows them to Charles Lyons, representative from Philadelphia Zoological Gardens, right, who took the animals to Philadelphia.

Dogs At Large Wreak Havoc On Wildlife During Winter

AS DAYS lengthen and winter draws to a close, dogs are once again making life difficult for deer and other wildlife species in the forests of Pennsylvania.

With the approach of fawning season, the deer have become heavier and find it more difficult to escape from hungry and predatory dogs. Figures compiled by the Game Commission show that dogs killed 77 deer throughout the state during the month of January.

This predation by dogs is not confined to deer alone. District Game Protector Albert Kriefski of Pike County reports that last week a pack of dogs routed a female bear from her den and drove her for about a quarter of a mile.

Several sportsmen who were in the area back-tracked the bear and discovered that the chase begun in a heavy rhododendron thicket.

They found where a bear had hollowed out a den under a large fallen tree trunk and had lined it with rhododendron leaves. Two baby cubs, healthy and alive, were discovered crawling around in the den.

It was a cold day and the sportsmen were afraid that the cubs might freeze without their mother so they picked up the cubs and turned them over to Game Protector Kriefski.

Kriefski went back to the den which is located about three miles from the nearest road in the Protected Land Area, hoping the female might have returned to the den but there was no evidence that she had done so.

It was useless to leave the cubs since apparently the bear had no intention of returning. The cubs have been turned over to the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens.

Roy Trexler, northeast field division supervisor, states that sportsmen and non-sportsmen alike can help to alleviate this problem. He advised that persons living in areas where deer and other game species are found should keep their dogs under control.

While wild or stray dogs running alone or in packs receive much of the blame for game killing, quite often the reverse is also true. Many times family pets are responsible for much of the killing and all too often the owner of such a dog might be completely unaware of the fact that his dog might be chasing deer or other wild animals.

Trexler states that the penalty for persons whose dogs are caught while chasing or killing deer or bear is quite severe.

Music Boosters Work With Barrett PTA On Program

BARRETT — Members of the Music Boosters of the Pocono Mountain Joint School are working closely with members of the Barrett Elementary PTA in the second presentation of the "Wedding Gown Revue" coming up Thursday night at the Joint School auditorium.

They have arranged to have boys in the band act as ushers for the night and six of the band mothers will serve coffee and tea from silver tea services in the cafeteria following the presentation.

Mrs. Donald Hartman, Tannersville is baking a traditional wedding cake to be used as a centerpiece for the buffet table. Lace tablecloths will provide the background for the table.

Lighting for the show will be handled by Ralph Wesner, choral director of the jointure. Among the decorations on the stage in the 850 seating capacity auditorium will be rhododendron and greens placed by Dale Price. Each bride will enter the rear of the auditorium and proceed down the center aisle to music provided by Mrs. Marie LaBar at the organ console. The model will mount the steps and be framed by a floral decorated trolley as Madalyn Maloney gives items of interest concerning the gown.

During the program, Clifford Werkheiser, Miss Kathy Williams and Robert and Jean Wolbert will present solo selections. Among them will be the popular wedding melody, "Because."

Tickets are available from band members, Music Boosters and at the door. For this presentation, student tickets will be sold at half the adult donation. Proceeds will purchase uniforms for the Pocono Mountain Joint Junior Senior High School Band in the school colors, red and white. Robert Lane, instrumental instructor is co-ordinating the efforts of the two school groups.

Foreign Film Programs At ESSC Open To Public

THREE outstanding foreign films—features and shorts—will be presented in the auditorium of the East Stroudsburg State College on Saturday, at 8:15 p.m., on the following dates: March 3, April 14 and May 5.

The films are sponsored by a community group which includes four members of the college faculty. ESSC students are admitted on their activities cards. The public is asked to subscribe to the series; interested people should telephone HA 1-2903 for details.

College Paper Is Suspended

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The men's student government association of the University of Pennsylvania has voted to suspend publication of the Daily Pennsylvanian, campus newspaper.

The association controls the money allotted the student newspaper.

Robert F. Longley, dean of men, said Saturday the action was taken because the association felt the newspaper's reporting and editorials were irresponsible and distasteful.

Melvin Goldstein, editor-in-chief, said "It is obvious Longley is using student government to get revenge on the Daily Pennsylvanian for past criticism."

Longley said the action is backed by Dr. Gaylord Harnwell,

Church Fire At Bangor Saturday

BANGOR — A fire in the basement of Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church was reported Saturday at 10:40 a.m. There was little damage caused by the blaze.

Fire officials believe the fire was caused by a leak in the gas pipe. The gas being ignited by a spark from workmen moving articles in the basement.

Clayton Bisher, a member of the church council, said he had smelled gas fumes as he worked in the basement.

The Rescue, Liberty and Second Ward fire companies responded to the call.

Humphrey Hints He Might Run

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said Sunday he feels he could have been elected president in 1960 if he had won the Democratic nomination—and he hinted he might try again.

He refused to rule out the possibility that he might seek the presidency again in 1968 although he said he has no present plans to do so.

Humphrey, speaking in a television interview (CBS-Washington Conversation), added:

"I can assure you I plan on running for re-election to the United States Senate in 1966."

Humphrey, Democratic whip in the Senate, said the 1960 campaign did not leave any bitterness between him and the then Sen. John F. Kennedy, who became the Democratic nominee and was elected president.

The first women publisher was Elizabeth Timothy, who published the South Carolina Gazette in 1739.

Heart Fund Sunday Gives Drive Total From Districts

AS the Monroe County Heart Fund drive neared its final day, many of the county chairmen have submitted their collections made yesterday.

The complete list of collections made will be released later this week by Mrs. Mary Fontanella, county campaign chairman. The fund campaign will end Feb. 28.

Mrs. Fontanella of Mount Pocono was unable to attend yesterday's Heart Fund count at the bank. She injured her foot last Thursday when she slipped on some ice. However, she has been carrying on many of her campaign duties from her home via telephone.

Following is an incomplete list of funds collected yesterday—Heart Sunday—by the Monroe County Heart Fund workers from areas throughout the county.

Stroudsburg, Second Ward—$102.45; Third Ward—$134.70; Fifth Ward—$128.45.

East Stroudsburg, First Ward—$130.99; Second Ward—$100.10; Sixth Ward—$138.97.

Chestnut Hill—$156.92; Delaware Water Gap—$67.91; Hamilton Township (southern)—$134.13; Jackson Twp.—$101.50; Paradise Twp.—$163.47; Pocono Twp.—$173.65; Price Twp.—$31.85; Smithfield Twp.—$150.37; Stroud Twp.—(Eastern Middle)—$88.53; Stroud Twp. (Northern)—$29.78 and Kunkletown—$119.80.

The monies were to be submitted at the First Stroudsburg National Bank between the hours of 3 and 6 p.m. yesterday, but many chairmen and workers were still canvassing their areas at this time. This was one reason why some areas had not reported their totals.

Other areas are continuing their campaigns this week. Barrett will canvass its area this week and a number of other localities will work to complete their collection by the last day.

Endearing Young Deer

TWO BOYS are chased by a deer, but all he wanted was something to eat and someone to play with.

Dale Fish and Robert George, both of Middle Smithfield Township, were sleigh riding yesterday at Pardee Place's shale pit when a young deer chased them up the hill.

The deer overtook the slightly frightened boys and nudged them when he caught up with them. The boys went home and loaded up with apples and sugar and returned to the hill.

The young deer returned and they fed the animal. As the boys returned to sleigh riding the deer observed their actions. He remained in the area to watch the boys the entire afternoon.

Plans Approved By AEC For Atomic Power Plant

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Construction plans of the world's first high-temperature, helium-cooled atomic power station were given final approval by the Atomic Energy Commission, it was announced in Washington Sunday night.

The nuclear plant will be built by the Philadelphia Electric Co. and 52 other electric utility firms from New York to Hawaii. Jointly they now generate nearly half of the electricity produced in the United States and are the largest combination of privately-owned firms to plan an atomic power project.

The plant is expected to be completed by mid-1964 on an isolated rural mountain site along the Susquehanna River at Peach Bottom, York County, Pa., not far from the Maryland border.

Total estimated cost: Around $47.5 million. It will be big enough to supply residential industrial electricity needs of a community of 50,000.

The actual construction cost of the 40,000-kilowatt installation is set at $24.5 million, and will be paid by the 53 utilities organized as High Temperature Reactor Development Associates, Inc. (HTR-DA). Preliminary work already is started.

Philadelphia Electric will own and operate the completed facility as part of its present 3.5 million kilowatt generating system. The other firms will send their energy to the plant.

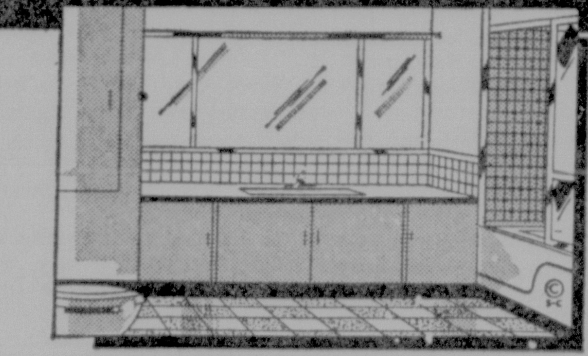

Engineers to the station for experience in nuclear-fired generation. The AEC issued the construction permit after lengthy hearings established the plan's design conforms to rigid nuclear safety standards.

Philadelphia Electric is putting up $8 million of the construction cost and is providing the 600-acre site. It would cost a utility about this amount of money to build a conventional steam generating plant of 40,000 kilowatt capacity.

The Peach Bottom facility will be similar in many respects to a conventional power station except that instead of a furnace where coal, oil or gas is burned to produce heat a reactor will split atoms to produce the heat, which in turn, converts water to steam, spinning the turbines generating electricity.

Peach Bottom will be the first nuclear plant to produce commercial electric power at modern steam conditions of 1,000-degree Fahrenheit temperature and pressure of 1,450 pounds per square inch. This is expected to be done cheaper than ever before.

Police Investigate Pelvic Bone Found By Dog

STATE POLICE from Mount Pocono barracks were called to the home of Arlett J. Gallagher, 49, Tobyhanna, RD 1, yesterday at 8:45 p.m. to investigate a pelvic bone carried home by the Gallagher dog.

Police were continuing the investigation last night as The Daily Record went to press.

Gallagher, a 49-year-old retired US Air Force man, told police that his 15-month-old dog "Wooley" left the house yesterday afternoon for about one hour.

When the dog returned it had a pelvic bone, partly covered with ice, in its mouth.

State Police did not determine if the bone came from a human or an animal and sent it to the Monroe County General Hospital where it will be studied today to determine its origin.

Trooper Homer Jones, from Mount Pocono barracks, and Monroe County Coroner John C. F. Foelker are continuing the investigation. Gallagher will aid the men in tracking the route of the dog today in an attempt to locate the remainder of the skeleton.

The Medicine Men

The use of magic to cure ills is far older than scientific medicine, and in Washington sometimes it still is the preferred treatment.

The other day, H. Lewis Rietz, president of the Health Insurance Association of America, told how advocates of medical care for the aged under Social Security can take ordinary accurate figures and do emotional magic with them.

For instance, those who promote the Social Security extension often say that the income of 53 percent of all persons over 65 years old in the nation is less than $1,000 a year. And they are right. But they leave you with the illusion that this is exceptional. In fact, says Mr. Rietz, 59 percent of all persons under 65 in the United States have incomes less than $1,000 a year.

The public also is skillfully misled on the cost of such a medical program. We are told that we need to add only half of one percent of our taxable earnings to the Social Security tax to get the program. Glossed over is the fact that the amount of earnings on which Social Security taxes are payable would have to rise from the present $4,800 figure to $5,200. And that extra $400 would be taxed at the full Social Security rate.

So, points out Mr. Rietz, the worker who now pays $150 a year in Social Security taxes (did you know it was that much?) would be paying $283.66 by 1968 — an increase of 89 percent in just six years.

Even so, Mr. Rietz doesn't think it would be enough to cover the cost of the program, and knowing such costs is Mr. Rietz's business. He thinks the Administration costs estimates are about a third what they should be. He didn't mention it, but more fakery is involved in the idea that this is "prepaid medical insurance" for the old age of those now working. Those now working would merely pay medical bills for those already retired.

When today's workers retire, a new generation might shoulder the bills. Or, a new generation in control of Congress, if it tired of the burden, could simply junk the whole program.

—And Where We'll Stop Nobody Knows!

Opinions Of Other Editors

Costly Services

Republican cries of anguish over Democratic spending do not detract from the fact Gov. David L. Lawrence has worked a financial marvel—wiping out an inherited $177 million deficit and starting the final year of his term with an $8 million surplus.

Lawrence has had a lot of help from Pennsylvania taxpayers who, among other things, are paying one of the highest sales taxes in the nation.

Lawrence also has served the political fortunes of the Democratic party exceedingly well in this important election year by denying Republicans one of their stock issues—Democratic deficits.

But we think the governor, even though he did balance the state budget and further the political ends of his party, performed an even more valuable service to the public.

What is that? Lawrence pointed out rather forcefully in his budget message that 70 percent of the state's income from taxes will be paid out in grants and subsidies to local governments, schools, welfare programs and for the operation of state institutions such as colleges, hospitals and prisons.

For every dollar the state receives in taxes, 57.1 cents will go to local governments in grants and subsidies; 16.3 cents to institutions, 10.7 for public assistance, 9.8 cents for the cost of operating the state government. These are the big expense items.

The figures show that if any major savings are to be made, they must be made primarily in the category of state grants to local governments.

In other words, services from the state, or the federal government for that matter, cost money, tax money.

Now, thanks to Lawrence, the public has some idea of just how costly these "services" have become in recent years.

Nobody, contrary to popular belief, is getting something for nothing from any level of government. York Dispatch

Memos Of A Spaceman

You may be stunned to learn that the spinning of the earth is slowing down. It is losing one whole second every 100,000 years. When it stops whirling—bye!

Rockets are fantastically complex instruments. They have over 40,000 parts. In their delicate guidance systems 102 switches must click perfectly during the first five minutes of flight—or failure.

The biggest news is the oldest story. Rockets to the moon would come as no surprise to Leonardo da Vinci. He not only conceived the idea of rockets but suggested the atomic theory of matter.

Countless baby planets are roaming the wild blue yonder. Some are only about a mile long.

One of the arguments against the possibility of interplanetary travel is that humans are incapable of withstanding excessive speeds required for such a journey. The fact is that all of us are now traveling at 66,000 mph. That is the speed of the earth in its orbit.

Alpha Centauri—one of the closer stars—is 4 light years away from us. Consequently, if you travel 36,000 mph it would take merely 80,000 years to reach it.

Over two thousand years ago the Greeks originated a science known as astronomy. During that period a Grecian author named Lucian authored a science-fiction yarn highlighted by an interplanetary romance.

Those strange animals known as human beings dwell at the bottom of an ocean of air—the earth's atmosphere.

The earth has been engaged in its dizzy journey for over 3,000 million years. There never was a more impressive merry-go-round.

The guided missile idea is stale news to Jules Verne fans. The Imaginative One described such a weapon in one of his novels. Moreover, the idea of utilizing rocket weapons was the subject for numerous essays penned by 15th Century military experts.

The sun is a fiery blob for a very good reason: It is continually rocked by massive nuclear explosions. It requires approximately 8 minutes for sunbeams to reach our epidermis.

A day on the moon might be comparable to a weekend with a bore. A day lasts 400 hours.

Jupiter must be a wonderful place for lovers, poets and songwriters. It has a dozen moons. And it is big-big-big. The planet exceeds the size of 1,300 earths.

The following fact is undoubtedly an illusion-wrecker for the romantics. Stars, which seem so pretty, are merely huge masses of gaseous material. Outspace is composed chiefly of whirling gas.

Hold tight—the earth tilts to one side as it spins.

Every star is a sun. Every sun is surrounded by countless planets. How many stars are there? Zillions, folks, zillions. Telescopes cannot spot every sparkler. Some of the giant twinklers measure 400 million miles.

Comets, the playful ragamuffins, are constantly tumbling around their playpen—the sky. One of them—Halley's Comet—appears every seventy-six years. The earth will witness its swift flash again in 1986.

Remember to include the sun in your prayers. Life as we know it could not exist without its light and heat. In other words, the sun is something more than a billboard for Florida.

The glint of a star depends on its weight. The heavier it is—the more it shimmers.

The sky has its own traffic laws. From the smallest fragment to the largest star—the objects travel in a specific lane. In a way, the sky traffic is much safer than a U.S. highway.

If you're eager to escape the earth's gravity—just zoom along at 7-miles-per-second.

Stars don't twinkle. What seems like a twinkle is caused by air currents. There are blue stars, white, yellow and red.

Here is a brief blog of the planets: First they were just balls of hot gas. As they cooled they turned into liquid. After many years the liquid began to become a solid.

Don't knock gravity. It prevents air from escaping into space.

The movements of planets in orbits are so exact that astronomers can forecast where a certain part of the solar system will be at any moment thousands of years hence.

Scientists have mapped out the sky just as the earth is divided into countries. The naked eye can see only about 3,000 stars. Astronomers concur that the deeper we peer into space the more stars will be discovered. The universe is limitless. Its size is actually beyond the scope of anyone's imagination.

The next time you look at the Milky Way—remember that you are a part of it. The sky is our home on the sky.

The stars, the sun, the moon and the earth are constantly moving in circles at a bewildering rate of speed. Whirling from here to there and going everywhere as well as nowhere. Millions of meteors bombard the earth's atmosphere daily. Most of them burn out before they reach the earth.

All planets are in the dark. The light they radiate is merely reflected sunlight.

Don't ask me why—but the earth rotates slower in May and quicker in November.

Astronomers would have you believe that the universe was born 4,000 million years ago.

The Allen-Scott Report

Central Handling

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — The State Department's inept handling of the "Alliance for Progress" program for Latin America is coming under the scorching fire of a bipartisan group of senators.

Senate Democratic Whip Hubert Humphrey, D., Minn., and Senator Margaret Chase Smith, R., Maine, the most outspoken of the group, are bluntly warning that if drastic changes in administration aren't made immediately the President's exciting new joint aid program is doomed to failure.

They are urging President

Kennedy to assign full responsibility for the program to a single official and to place all loan activities and project planning in a single agency rather than several as is now the case.

These senators view the program as floundering on the rocks of indecision after a flashy start. Complaints of inaction on requests and project planning from numerous Latin American countries are piling up at the State Department and overflowing to Congress.

The State Department's bungling is so shocking that Senator Humphrey, a strong supporter of the program, called the alarming situation to the President's attention during a White House legislative meeting, saying:

"Your Alliance for Progress for Latin America is bogged down in a bureaucratic mess, Mr. President. If changes in administration aren't made immediately, the whole program is going to founder on the rocks of indecision. It has hit high-center and is spinning its wheels."

"If that is the case, what's the main cause?" inquired the President, adding: "I knew we had problems in the program, but I didn't realize the situation was that bad."

"You can't put the finger of responsibility on anyone," replied Humphrey. "The truth is that you can't find out who is in charge. Every official you talk to about a Latin country's program says 'they are studying this program' or 'they are studying this project,' but you never can find out who they are. For a while, I thought you had put a 'Mr. They' in charge of the program."

"What do you propose should be done?" asked the President. "You should place the full responsibility under one official and one agency," declared Humphrey, "even if you have to set up a semi-autonomous agency like the Peace Corps. If you don't make a drastic change in the way the program is being administered, it is doomed; and you know what that means—the loss of Latin America to the Communists."

"I will take this up immediately with Secretary Rusk," promised the President. "I'm shocked by what you've told me."

Senator Humphrey, a key member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeated his shocking account to Secretary of State Rusk and Fowler Hamilton, director of the newly-organized Agency for International Development that handles the foreign aid program.

Both promised to investigate. A Woman's View: Senator Margaret Chase Smith is even more deeply concerned about the lack of State Department firmness in administering the program and its failure to help our best friends in the Hemisphere.

A member of the powerful Senate Appropriations Subcommittee for Foreign Aid, Senator Smith plans to intensively question all officials connected with the program before voting billions more for it.

She intends to call the situation to the attention of the Senate in a major speech this week, denouncing the Kennedy Administration for its lack of firmness in administering the program and in its fight against Communism in Latin America.

"Unless we are more firm and resolute in the administration of the Alliance for Progress," she will charge, "it will not only fail but will worsen the situation in Latin America. Our position throughout Latin America has been undermined by Castro's Communist control of Cuba. We have literally accommodated our Communist enemies with our timid and stupid policies."

Senator Smith is going to review her recent trip to Latin America, stating:

"We inquired especially into what plans have been put into effect: How the program was being received by South America. How it was being administered. What we found was disturbing. What we found was real danger to the U.S. . . . We found a deeply ingrained cynicism and growing lack of respect for the U.S."

Like Senator Humphrey, Mrs. Smith will call for the placing of the program under one head, as follows:

"We need to have all our efforts channeled through one official agency, rather than having several agencies operating independently of each other with the right hand not knowing what the left hand is doing."

Bury Tuberculosis

By Burton H. Fom, M.D.

Can carrying a baby bring on tuberculosis?

With her baby only a few months old, Mrs. N. was already expecting another. She'd cough and retch until her face turned purple.

Her chest ached and she couldn't eat. Most days she just stayed in bed—completely pooped.

Did she have tuberculosis? Was that why her second baby arrived seven weeks early without a breath of life?

She's afraid to go for an X-ray. Afraid TB might tear her from home, husband and baby. She buried her head in the sand, hoping that tuberculosis — or whatever she has—will go away. Panic has blinded her!

Infants Others

If she has tuberculosis, she can infect both Hubby and Junior. And her infection can get out of hand! Tuberculosis still kills ten to fifteen thousand Americans each year.

Tuberculosis could hardly explain the tragedy of her second child. Only a violent infection racing through Mother's blood stream can spread to Baby. And doctors hardly ever find this trouble today.

Even though mild tuberculosis often improves—without medicine—while Mother's expecting pregnancy can cause a flare-up. That's why all expectant mothers should be tested—and X-rayed, if necessary. Today's miracle drugs can usually control the infection even before Baby arrives.

Cesarean Operation

Occasionally the doctor may ease Junior into the world through a Cesarean operation to help Mom avoid the strain and pain of labor.

Veteran's Guide

Q—Is it true that married children of veterans have some educational rights?

A—Yes, provided that (a) their veteran-parent is deceased and that the death was due to a service-connected disability and (b) that the son or daughter is between 18 and 23, although exceptions to this may be made in some instances. These "children" are termed "war orphans" for the purpose of the War Orphans Educational Assistance program and their marriage does not deprive them of this benefit.

Q—Will an annual GI insurance dividend be paid during 1962 and when?

A—Payments of the annual GI insurance dividend are now being made and will reach each eligible policyholder on or about the date of the anniversary of his policy's issuance.

Q—As a war-veteran with a non-service-connected disability, have succeeded in arranging admission to a VA hospital at a future date. But I cannot afford the cost of travel to the hospital which is some distance from my home. How do I apply for travel at government expense?

A—Write to the VA hospital which has arranged for your future admission, explain the situation and request authorization of travel expense.

The Burden Of The Proof

The Russians always want to be first about everything, but now the burden of the proof is on them. We opened every window. We showed every instrument at work. It is not necessary to send a Klaus Fuchs to find out what we do and how we do it. Stand in front of a television screen and look! It's a free show for all.

The Russians now want to pool knowledge. We always pool knowledge. Tovarisch! Maybe the American people are not too smart, but we do not like secrets. Since the end of World War II, the United States has been ready to agree upon a formula to pool atomic knowledge and to put it under the control and inspection of the United Nations. That was the Plan.

They thought we were failing. We seemed to muddle all over the place, losing time in what seemed endless discussion as obscure people expressed their ideas and brought in blueprints. We let everybody see our failures because we have a peculiar notion that there is no monopoly on brains, that sometimes the simplest man can solve the most complex problem. We recall that Thomas Edison never went to college; we know that Henry Ford was a mechanic.

And so, we let everybody take a try at things and bring in their plans and meet the cold face of a uniformed expert or sit in front of a banker who cannot understand why this fellow wants to borrow a million dollars when he ought to be holding a job at union pay. But in the end, we put the thing together and there is always a Lindbergh or a John Glenn who will risk his life for God and country.

All the world saw John Glenn's family—his father and mother, his wife and two children. There they were on the screen, modest, quiet folk who prayed to God that it all might go well but who knew what was happening. We had no secrets from them. The children knew every move that their father would make.

The burden is now on the Russians. Let us see them at work, out in the open. That is another thing the Russians can learn from us: we are not afraid of failure and do not hold it against a man. In fact, instead of calling ours the "private enterprise system," a better, simple explanation is that it is the "risk system." Every enterprise is undertaken at risk. We never used to guarantee anyone that just being born was a free pass to anything. We expected a man to use his initiative and to have an incentive to produce, to benefit by his labors but also to risk the possibility of it not turning out.

That is our story, Tovarisch! For more than 300 years our people have lived that way. Perhaps it is difficult to understand these small towns in Ohio which you watched on the screen. There are no rich people in those towns, no exploiters of anybody or any.

Just plain working people and small storekeepers who all earn about the same, who ask for no special benefits but just a fair chance. Nobody in one of those towns has to join a party to get along in this hard world.

You used to talk about the power of Wall Street. You stopped that when you discovered that Wall Street was just another of thousands of streets where Americans did commerce with their savings. Then you used the phrase, "powerful political circles." The truth is that we really don't have any very powerful people in this country.

We are a nation of very simple people, folks like that family of John Glenn's that you saw on the television screen, folks that do not ask too much of life, only to be let alone, to dream and speak and read and write and worship God as each one has it in his heart to do.

That is why a whole nation stood still while John Glenn rode the clouds. We were not boasting. We were not asking for first place. Behind every instrument stood a person like John Glenn—not great generals or political strategists—just simple men who did their duty.

Now it is up to the Russians to produce their score card.

Tr and Stop Me

A rather New Yorker, recuperating from a severe nervous ailment, visited a tiny town on the north Jamaican Coast that bears the romantic name of Runaway Bay. Here he took rooms in a lovely old plantation house, presided over by the genteel descendant of the original builder.

On the first night of his visit, the New Yorker was walking down the dark passage to his sleeping quarters when a shadowy form suddenly appeared before him, whispered frantically, "Save me! Save me!"—then promptly disappeared.

The New Yorker fled back to the drawing room and told his hostess what had happened. "This is no place for a man with my nerves," he quavered. "Don't be silly," laughed the hostess. "You've had a rare bit of luck I'd say. You've met my great, great grandmother Clara. She rarely pops up these days. She was murdered in that passageway in 1839."

TRAGEDY IN DEEP WOODS — Button buck feeding on fungus and bark of birch tree caught his foot in crotch, panicked, and died from exhaustion. Deer have been known to get caught by their heads, but by the foreleg is very rare. Buck was found in the Tannersville Big Pocono area.

THE TRAP — Close-up shows how deer's foot was wedged in crotch unable to get free. Reaching high for feed, he did not have the leverage necessary to extricate his leg. Hoof gives mute testimony of strange accidents that can happen to wildlife. (Staff Photo Series By MacLeod)

UNHAPPY TASK — Game Protector John Doebling tries to remove leg of deer from tree but extreme cold weather has frozen the body of the buck solid to the birch and also to the ground. A game protector's lot is not always a happy one, and a tragedy such as this brings him a sense of personal loss.

MRS. Helene Maier of Mountain Road entertained at a dinner at her home, Wednesday night, in honor of the birthday of her son Charles Maier. Guests, some of whom had difficulty finding their way up the mountain in the fog and had recourse to chains for the slippery roads, were Mr. Maier's brother-in-laws and sisters; Mr. and Mrs. J. Think and children Patricia, Wayne and Keith of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. John Smeltz and son Paul, Mrs. Rose Patti and Miss Lucy Patti of Slateford, and the guest of honor.

Mrs. Helene Maier has expressed the satisfaction voiced by other residents of this section, who use Mountain Road early in the morning, for the work of the Borough Highway Department in sanding that road when it is slippery. The work is done in time to benefit those who must get down the hill to work each day.

Water Gap has two very busy people taking special courses at Lehigh University. Mr. Paul Morton has been accepted as candidate for a Doctorate in School Administration. Mrs. Alyse Morton, teacher of third and fourth grades in the local public school, is studying for her Masters Degree in Elementary Education, specializing in reading.

Mrs. Edna Bjorn is the student teacher for third and fourth grade work in the public school here until the end of March. The four grades have greeted their new teacher of Music who is Miss Joan Currier, a New Jerseyite who comes to the work here from North Carolina. She is one person honestly glad to see snow after two years south.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Bishop and Mrs. Otto Kirschner motored to Allentown, Friday to spend the day.

Finish Depends On Effect You Desire

REDWOOD can be finished in a number of different ways, depending on the effect you wish to obtain and maintain.

First of all, there are natural finishes which do not conceal the grain and texture of this popular material and which modify its color only slightly, if at all.

Secondly, there are flat pigmented stains which hide the grain until they have weathered and which change the color of the wood.

Lastly, there are house paints, either oil-based or water-thinned, which give the surface completely and give a wide choice of colors.

With redwood, as with any building material, even the best coatings made will not perform properly if the building has not been properly constructed. Since moisture is the most common cause of finish failures, proper construction procedures should be followed.

Moisture generated within the house should be prevented from entering the siding by installation of vapor barriers. Air vents and louvers should be included to allow moisture to escape harmlessly. Water should be prevented from entering from the outside by caulking any breaks in the siding and places where dissimilar building materials meet.

The redwood industry advocates the use of kiln-dried redwood only for siding and other architectural uses and holds that air-dried redwood contains so much moisture—which will harm the finish—that it can be classified as green lumber.

For a natural finish, the recommended procedure is to apply two coats of clear water repellent. The first coat should be brushed on the back, face, edges and ends of siding before it is erected. The second coat is brushed on after the siding is installed. Aluminum, stainless steel or hot-dipped galvanized nails are recommended to prevent staining. If the nails are countersunk, a non-oily wood filler should be used where a natural finish is to be applied. If the wood is to be painted, putty can be used.

Water repellents slow down the fading process of redwood and the wood gradually changes from its natural reddish-brown color to a buckskin tan. For a slightly different color, a pigmented stain can be mixed with the repellent.

A second type of natural finish involves the use of bleaches which turn the redwood the color of driftwood. Bleaches contain some gray pigment and care should be used to prevent lap marks.

A third type of finish that does not obscure the grain is a linseed oil finish which darkens the wood considerably. During dry, warm weather either raw or boiled linseed oil can be brushed, sprayed or mopped on. Boiled oil should be used during cool, damp weather. Two coats are required with either type and care should be taken to prevent a build-up of oil on the surface.

Pigmented stains are available in many colors and give a flat appearance to the wood. Two coats are generally required for new wood and can be brushed or rolled on. Heavily pigmented stains are the most durable, but lighter bodied stains show more grain and texture. Stains are not recommended for furniture because the stain may rub off and soil clothing. When the stain has worn away to the extent that portions of the wood show through, it is time to refinish with a single coat.

Thermostat, In Nerve Of Heat Center

IT'S BEEN estimated by various plumbing-heating industry sources that approximately 15-million thermostats now in use in American homes are antiquated and obsolete by modern precision standards. Yet, despite the discomfort, inconvenience and higher fuel costs brought on by a faulty, outdated thermostat control, these many million persons don't think of replacement until the unit breaks down completely.

The heat thermostat is the real nerve center of the heating system, automatically anticipating temperature changes and varying the degree of heating output accordingly.

As with any necessary product, technical advances over the years have brought an unvarying precision. Today's best thermostats, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, give automatic heat control with a variance of no more than one degree from the chosen setting. The control contacts are no longer subject to electrical corrosion.

While speaking of the setting it is important of note that, for room comfort, the thermometer reading on the thermostat and your setting for a desired comfortable temperature should not be thought of as absolutes. The important point is whether the area being heated is comfortable, not what the thermometer reads. Humidity, outside temperature, what you are wearing and doing—these variables and others alone determine what the setting "should" be on any given day. Consider house comfort, not what the thermometer says.

Only a qualified heating contractor can initially set the mechanism to provide satisfactory operation.

Yetter Starts Search

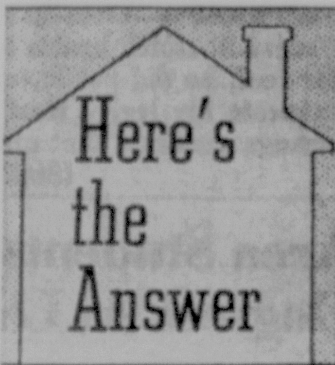

THIS month, McCulloch Corporation of Los Angeles, announced the production of its 1,000,000th Chain Saw and are celebrating this record breaking achievement by conducting a search for the "MILLIONTH SAW."

According to Van D. Yetter, owner of the local McCulloch dealership, the lucky customer who has purchased this Millionth saw by April 1st will receive an all-expense paid weeks vacation for two, courtesy of the company.

At the same time, Yetter announced that a "search" is also being conducted for the oldest saw in each of the many models McCulloch has produced since 1948.

The people having these "oldest saws" will receive a brand new 1962 McCulloch model in exchange for their used one.

Yetter suggests that all chain saw users come to his "Open House" and enter this unusual "Saw Search." "The way I figure it," he says, "everybody's got a chance to win."

QUESTION: An old kitchen chair that has been in our family for many years has one leg a little shorter than the others. Although it has been unsteady for years, we have never done anything about it. Now we would like to try. How do we go about it? The legs of the chair are round and painted a dark brown.

ANSWER: There are a number of ways in which the short chair leg can be lengthened. One of these is to measure the diameter of the bottom of the leg and then see whether you can buy a wooden dowel of the same diameter. Cut off a piece of the dowel long enough to make up the difference between the short leg and the others. Glue it to the bottom of the leg and paint to match.

A disadvantage of this is that the bottom of the chair leg may not be flat across and therefore won't make good contact with the piece of dowel.

A method that can be used regardless of the condition of the bottom of the chair leg is to attach wood putty or plastic wood to the leg. Shape the putty carefully, making it just a bit flatter than the chair leg itself. When the putty is completely dry and thoroughly hard, sand it down until it is even with the leg. Then do your painting.

Safeguard Family Health with Humidispray Today

HOW OFTEN in the winter season have you noticed the heating in your home leaves the air a bit on the dry side? This dry air causes a burning sensation in the nostrils.

Of course, this is but one of nature's warning signs that something is not right. It indicates the possibilities of serious health problems in your home.

Lack of proper moisture content in the air in your home can often cause colds, headaches, dry skin and scalp and a host of other unhealthy conditions in your body.

The Lennox people, pioneers in the warm air heating field, have introduced Humidispray, a wonderful new method of putting that needed moisture into the air in your home in just the right amount.

In Heating Ducts Humidispray is installed right in the heating ducts of your heating system allowing filtering of the air too.

The water used in the system is permanently piped to the apparatus and valving of air and water mixtures is set and may then be forgotten.

Constipation is of anodized aluminum and installation of Humidispray is good for a lifetime as there is nothing to rust, corrode or plug.

Walter Stevens will be happy to give you more information on how Humidispray can be installed in your present heating system. Just call or drop in at Stroudsburg Furnace Co. HA 1-8610.

SHOWN IS THE AMAZING automatic paint mixer at Hamill's Paint Center, 37 S. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg. This phenomena of the jet age mixes no less than 1200 colors, almost any shade imaginable.

Have Both Kinds

IT'S a good idea to have both a stiff putty knife and a flexible one when you prepare surfaces for painting. The stiff knife is best for putting around windows and for scraping off loose paint. The flexible knife is better for smoothing out the filler when you repair holes and cracks in plaster and wood. Incidentally, don't use your putty knife for opening paint cans; you might break it. Your paint dealer will either give you, or sell you for a few cents, a special paint can opener.

Decide Now

If you are planning to rearrange pictures and mirrors after a new paint job, why not try out the new locations before you start painting. Then you can see how these objects look and not worry about marring a newly painted wall. After you've decided where they go, you can remove the old hooks and nails and patch the holes with spackle or patching plaster.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Somewhere has probably worked out a mathematical proportion showing the speed of time and its reverse ratio to the things you'd planned to do with that time, accelerated by the number of things you've got to think about.

Even without the formula, I know the answer to this past weekend: It was about six hours long. Starting with the bridge party which by the clock lasted until midnight but seemed at most a good fast hour, counting eating.

Then we almost omitted the rest of the night altogether after I got home and we started talking wedding plans and after what seemed like 15 minutes, the clock said 4 a.m.

Saturday somehow telescoped down to about two hours judging by the amount of work actually accomplished. It's easy to lose an hour at a clip when in the midst of doing dishes, say, you get called into consultation about what kind of curtains would look well in the kitchen; upstairs to see what could be done about the paint stains on a bedroom floor moments of the summer the kids decided to paint the room themselves; and to the telephone.

Or you can lose an hour without any outside help when in the midst of pin-fitting a new slipcover you get caught in a day-dream of some miracle that could teleport you to Italy to accept that Premio Giornalistico in person and come out of it an hour later to discover you've pin-fitted the material right to the chair itself so the whole thing has to be repinned in order to take it off.

Sunday wasn't a bit longer between the sermon, which was also hand-tailored for a newly-engaged couple who arrived just in time to get a front-row seat for "Jesus' Teaching on Marriage," and right through a working day at the office when hours always vanish.

That figures out to only 5 hours and 15 minutes, but the rest of the six hours can be accounted for by the fact that we got the car stuck in the side driveway. Maybe it only did take 15 minutes to get it out but it seemed like an hour.

If just once the time units the the world lives by and my own personal timeclock would agree life would seem much more orderly.

Roast lamb leftover? If there are small fry in the family, they'll like it diced and served in a well-seasoned cream sauce.

Mrs. James Alan Kressler (Lens Art)

Miss Shirley Ann Fisher Bride Of James A. Kressler

Bangor — Miss Shirley Ann Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Fisher, Sr. of 720 Market St., Bangor was married on Saturday at 2 p.m. to James Alan Kressler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Kressler of 242 W. Berwick St., Easton.

They were married in the First Methodist Church, Bangor, by Rev. Warren L. Hackman, pastor of the Grandview Heights Methodist Church, Lancaster, assisted by Rev. Howard N. Reeves of the Bangor church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of angel mist lace and taffeta. It was fashioned with a sabrina neckline, long-pointed sleeves and a bouffant skirt with an obi bow and a brush train. Her headpiece held a fingertip veil of silk illusion and she carried a cascade bouquet of white baby orchids and baby ferns.

Miss Madeline Fisher, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of ruby taffeta with a white fur headpiece and carried a white fur muffed trimmed with American Beauty roses.

William Kressler served as his brother's best man.

Ushers were Claude S. Fisher, Jr. and Franklin D. Fisher of Ellicsville, both brothers of the bride.

John Alfred Hewett of Bangor, nephew of the bride, served as acolyte. The organist was Raymond Mutton of Pen Argyl with Mrs. Robert L. Durkee, cousin of the bride of Claymont, Del., as soloist.

A reception was held in the social rooms of the church following the ceremony.

After two weeks in Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Kressler will be at home at 220 Philadelphia Road, Easton.

The bride, a graduate of Bangor Area Joint High School, is employed as a teller in the Palmer Branch of Easton National Bank and Trust Co.

acre farm raising hogs, corn and small grains. It's a tremendous place for anyone who loves the outdoors, she says.

"Farm life is so wonderful to-day that I'd like to see my daughter on a farm when she finishes college and gets married. Years ago farm women hoped their daughters could get away from it all."

"But now the homes are modern and pretty, the farmer does not have as difficult a time working. Prices of hogs are bad, but I just keep thinking how grateful we are that we live in America."

Supervises Drive-In
"I don't like to see women work in the fields, except in a real emergency, although I think the farm wife should help her husband any way she can. Oh, I drive the tractor occasionally when I need to, but I have a regular part-time job, managing a restaurant, that lets me get home in time to greet my children when they return from school," she explains.

Mrs. Ballard works at a small drive-in that seats 35 people. She supervises the food and plans menus, just her dish of tea.

She's past president of her Home Demonstration Club and a member of the family test group on the Farm Journal for whom she tests out new items, supplies recipes and short cuts using mixes. She helped contribute recipes for their new cook-book, "Timesaving Country Cook Book." She didn't have an opportunity to cook in her growing years on a chicken and turkey farm. But she loves it.

Chef's trick: baste eggs, as they are frying, with butter.

Swiss Cheese Souffle For Flavor Change

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
SUCH delightful things to do with Swiss Cheese! Do you usually use cheddar cheese in a souffle? Change about! Try Swiss for an interesting flavor turnaround.

A chef's salad simply isn't the real thing without Swiss cheese. But one must: the cheese must be cut in matchlike strips. Don't ask us why. All we know is that this way it tastes best.

Use the cheese for grilled sandwiches, adding ham if you like. You can make these in a skillet, adding plenty of butter and toasting the sandwiches until golden brown. We think these are particularly good made with a robust whole-wheat bread. Company coming for lunch? Serve these sandwiches with mango chutney spooned into tiny lettuce cups; add a tossed green salad dressed with olive oil and wine vinegar, salt and freshly ground pepper.

Some cooks we know date on adding cubes of Swiss cheese to a Waldorf salad—you know the old-time combination of celery, apple, mayonnaise and sometimes nuts.

SWISS CHEESE SOUFFLE
1/3 cup butter
1/3 cup flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 cups milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3/4 pound finely grated Swiss cheese (about 2 cups)
6 eggs (separated)

Melt butter in a saucepan over low heat; stir in flour, salt, paprika and pepper. Add milk; cook and stir constantly until thickened. Remove from heat. Add Worcestershire and gradually the cheese, stirring vigorously until melted. Cook slightly. Beat egg yolks until thick and pale colored; fold thoroughly into cheese mixture. Beat egg whites until they hold soft peaks; fold gently but thoroughly into cheese mixture. Pour into an ungreased 2-quart souffle dish or similar casserole. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven about 1 hour or until a silver knife inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 6 servings.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

If anyone had told me last Monday that we would have a total of 60 entries in our Artificial Flower Arrangements contest, I would have scoffed. For the first few days after our ad ran, interest seemed to be nil... then came two or three entries... by midweek we had 19... when I last checked on Thursday afternoon there were 46... and when judging began Friday morning there were 60. All of them are so lovely it was difficult to see how the judges could possibly select three winners.

Arthur Widmer, realizing the enormity of their task, decided to make things a bit easier by awarding a number of additional ribbons for Honorable Mention. Even so, none of us fully realized the many problems the judges faced. Here they were — Margaret MacLaren and Mary Hall — confronted with 60 arrangements of all styles... formal... informal... whimsical... Oriental... and so on — with absolutely no rules to guide them. No wonder it took them hours!

On their first tour of the show, they later told me over luncheon in our Tea Room, they went by rules that are fairly standard in judging Flower Shows. They considered line... relationship of materials used... choice of color... and also whether or not the artificial flowers combined were those that would normally be in bloom at the same time. Keeping these standards in mind, both women tell me it was not too difficult to decide that Mrs. Sherwood Samet's arrangement in yellow, with flowers and lemons, rated first prize... an accomplishment which earned her a cash award and an additional 25.00 for the East Stroudsburg Elementary PTA. Mrs. Samet had four entries, and frankly, had I been a judge I would have voted for any one of them. It did not surprise me that she not only won first but was given honorable mention for a second entry combining rusty asters and purple grapes in a tall, classic vase.

Second prize winner was Mrs. John R. Smith who also utilized one large brown aster, a number of sprays of very pretty flowers that, I shame-facedly admit, I cannot identify and neither can our Gift Department—"I can sell 'em," Bea Brink told me, "but I'm not always sure what they are."—and tiny brown mums. Mrs. Jack Savitt won third prize for a formal "tree" arrangement of red roses and white marigolds, on a silver compote, mounted upon a blue-velvet covered pedestal.

Inasmuch as the other displays were so widely varied, Margaret and Mary divided them into groups before selecting honorable mention winners. One dainty, formal arrangement on an amethyst compote combines white tapers of varied height and white flowers... this won over other arrangements using candles. Mrs. Sherman Teeter's "arrangement in Black and White" received a ribbon because it is original from start to finish, she having made the black and white poppies of liquid plastic before designing the wall arrangement. Many exhibitors combined fruit and flowers, and Mrs. Weldon Cramer received a ribbon for her entry, utilizing blue flowers and blue grapes. Some exhibitors followed a theme, one of them being Mrs. William Bolcar who won a ribbon with her Dutch shoe, filled with miniature tulips, flanked by an admiring Dutch boy and girl. And Mrs. Charlotte Widdoss received a ribbon for her arrangement of flowers in an old fashioned spinning wheel, with pottery accessories of the same period in scale.

Our judges recommend that various classes be set up for next year's show, in order to simplify judging, and they were high in praise of every entry. At Wyckoff's we feel they did an excellent job in a difficult situation. Frankly, a few of my special favorites didn't receive awards, and I'm sure you also have a favorite or two that didn't catch the judges' eyes. That's how it always is. But when it comes right down to it, there isn't an arrangement in our show I would not be proud and happy to display in my home.

Don't Force Children Into Career You Choose

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

It's easy to talk up a storm about how much we, as parents, should assume the role of playing God when it comes to throwing out to our children the right guide lines to the right career opportunities.

It's also very human for each and every one of us to want to direct the offspring we've nurtured to what we think is the right thing for them. And, when all our pleading, analyzing and "making sense" adds up to a crisis in which the children go ahead and do what they'd planned anyhow, we somehow feel we've missed the boat to an opportunity just as much as the children have.

Staff Of Life
But crises are the meat and potatoes of building a life and a career and in many, many cases, after crises have been digested, everything turns out all right.

Such was the case of a boy whose story I recently heard. This 18-year-old boy, whom I'll call Bill, was the son of a suburban family that had college degrees, a family business, wealth and a "status" home. But as soon as Bill finished high school he made the shattering announcement that he intended to get an immediate job in the trucking business instead of entering the college where he'd been accepted and preparing for a career in the family business.

Argued And Reasoned
The family argued and reasoned with him. His father, aged 44, and his grandfather, aged 68, both proclaimed from their own private soap boxes that they knew much better than 18-year-old Bill when he was letting an opportunity pass. His mother was completely crushed.

But Bill was determined.

So while the family was still making speeches about the right thing for Bill to do, Bill himself walked out of the melee and got a job driving a truck for a suburban trucking firm.

That crushed the family even more, and all of them thought Bill bones about hoping that Bill would soon find out for himself that there was little opportunity in driving a truck.

His Father Argued With Him Over His Career Choice.

who wouldn't take hold of the guide lines his parents threw out had an expanding business of his own, a fleet of trucks, a lovely wife and a "status" home he'd built himself on the same hill where his family lived.

Can't Play God

Not all situations in which children refuse parental guide lines to career opportunities resolve themselves so successfully so soon, of course. But enough of them do to point out to every parent that none of us can ever really play God when it comes to pointing out the right opportunities and planning our children's lives.

In the end, each human being has to find his own guide lines himself.

Former Athletic Infielder Bishop Dies In Sleep

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP) — Max Bishop, second baseman on Connie Mack's famous Philadelphia Athletics championship team of some 30 years ago, died in his sleep Sunday at the home of a cousin. He was 62.

Bishop, coach of U.S. Naval Academy baseball team and a resident of Baltimore, was in Waynesboro to attend the funeral of his mother, Lulu B. Bishop, 93, who was to be buried Sunday. A brother, Mark, found Max dead in bed. He had been under treatment for a heart condition.

Bishop was a member of the famous Mack teams that also included such illustrious stars as Mickey Cochrane, Jimmy Foxx, Jimmie Dykes, Lefty Grove, Al Simmons, Mule Haas, George Earnshaw and Rube Walberg.

Key Member

Although he hit only .271 in 10 years with the Athletics and with the Boston Red Sox, he was a key member of the team that won the world championship in 1929 by a 4-1 margin over the Chicago Cubs and repeated in 1930 by downing the St. Louis Cardinals four games to two. The A's won the American League pennant again in 1931 but lost to the Cards in the World Series.

When Mack started breaking up the Athletics after the 1933 season, he sold Bishop to the Boston Red Sox, where Bishop played various infield positions for two years. He wound up his active playing days back where he started, with Baltimore, in 1936 and then scouted a year for the Detroit Tigers.

Bishop took over as baseball coach at Navy in 1938 and was due to retire March 1. In 24 years at Annapolis, Bishop's teams compiled a record of 306 victories and 143 defeats. His 1961 team won 24 of 26 games for the best record in Academy history.

ESSC Conditioning Sparks 27-7 Mat Win Over Ithaca

WHEN Clyde Witman took over as East Stroudsburg State College wrestling coach this year, he launched a crash program of conditioning.

The got in shape or turn in your suit tactics cost Whitman a few wrestlers but the extra work showed Saturday, when the Warriors crushed Ithaca 27-7.

East Stroudsburg lost only one bout and rolled off three pins in the opening matches. The conditioning paid off in the heavier weights, when the Warriors were able to score enough points in the final periods to win two matches and tie two more.

Four of the East Stroudsburg victories were by pins. Tom Gleason, George Kayal, Jerry Senick and Jeff Forsythe scored the Warrior falls. Kayal's victory was the most unusual.

Defensive Pin

The Warrior 130 pounder was not the offensive wrestler when he pinned his opponent but he managed to rock Lou Ricks to the mat long enough to score the fall.

Gleason had the fastest pin of the match, dumping Dave Wilson in 3:50 of their 123-pound battle.

After Kayal made it two falls in a row, Jerry Senick pinned Ray Hauley and the Warriors were in front 15-0.

Gary Hatch scored a 5-0 decision over the Warriors' Bob Walters at 147. Then came two ties.

Ted Heaps of East Stroudsburg fought to a 0-0 battle and East Stroudsburg's Dick Bell and Chuck Henke finished with three points each at 167 pounds.

Final Fall

Joe Mucka collected the final Warrior pin by using a crotch hold and half Nelson for a fall over Bob Mueller.

Jeff Forsythe, a freshman, ended the match with a 5-2 decision over Don Della Vella. Forsythe scored his winning points in the last period.

The Warrior victory was so complete that Ithaca had only 10 points in the bouts and were never able to score a near fall or pre-decision point against East Stroudsburg.

The victory was the fourth in nine matches for the Warriors.

Local Cagers Make League Scoring List

AREA high school basketball teams didn't fare too well in league play this year but several individual performers managed to finish near the top of the scoring races.

Pleasant Valley is on the bottom of the Black Diamond League with one game left, a make-up contest with Nesquehoning. The Bears' Don Rinker is third in the second half scoring race, averaging 19.3 points a game. His teammate Jim Fritz is eighth in the race at an even 17 points a game, only two-tenths of a point out of fifth position.

Loney Fourth

Stroud Union ended in seventh in the second half of the Lehigh Valley race. The Mounties' Warren Loney, with an average of 15.2 points a game, was fourth in the scoring race.

And Pen Argyl was fourth in the Northern Division of the Lehigh-Northampton League but managed to produce the division's fourth leading scorer, Dave Turzto. Turzto, a sophomore, hit for an average of 14.6 a game.

German Breaks Indoor Barrier

BERLIN, Germany (AP)—East Germany's Siegfried Hermann broke the world's second indoor sub-four-minute mile by registering 3:59.9 at an international track meet Sunday.

Hermann's time was one full second slower than that posted by America's Jim Beatty, three weeks ago at Los Angeles.

After Loss To Wilkes

Little Time Remaining For Eastburg, Hopewell

TIME is running out for the East Stroudsburg State College basketball team and Russ Hopewell.

The Warriors were defeated 85-72 by Wilkes Saturday night, their 10th loss in 18 games. In that game, East Stroudsburg's Russ Hopewell was limited to 14 points.

If East Stroudsburg is to finish above .500 it must win its remaining three games, an almost impossible task. Two of the games, Cheyney and Bloomsburg, are at home but for the final game, East Stroudsburg has to travel to Mansfield. The Mountaineers haven't lost a game in several years.

Hopewell, a senior, needs 28 points to break the school's four year scoring record of 1,412 points set from 1934-38 by Charley German.

Beatty Upset Over Waiting But Still Runs 4:00.2 Mile

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Beatty forgave the AAU Sunday for running his track championships 45 minutes late and causing him:

1. Distress.
2. To miss a chance to lower his 2-week-old indoor mile record of 3:58.9.
- "It's too bad things worked out the way they did," said the world's first indoor sub-four-minute miler. "I was all ready and warmed up and really intended to try to beat the record."
- "Then I discovered the mile was going to be run off three-quarters of an hour late and I cooled off."

Early Trouble

The trouble started early Saturday night in the national championships when the heats of the dash and hurdles started dragging that it would be late."

The biggest upset of the meet was the defeat of Ralph Boston of Tennessee State, the world king of the broad jumpers. Charlie Mays, 21, a Maryland State junior, got off a leap of 24-10 1/2 and won the event. Boston, who has been concentrating on his studies, could do no better than 24-7 for second place.

3 Titles Clinched

College Court Season Goes Into Final Week Of Season

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

College basketball heads into the final laps of the regular season this week with three major conference titles already settled, five in the "all but" stage and eight still up for grabs.

Already champions of their conferences and assured a berth in the NCAA Championship Tournament are Bowling Green, Mid-America, Western Kentucky, Ohio Valley, and Arizona State University, Border.

The "all but stage" group includes unbeaten and top-ranked Ohio State, headed for its third straight Big Ten crown; Yale, which has clinched a tie for the Ivy League title; UCLA, which can do no worse than a tie in the Big Five; Utah, pacing the Skyline with a 11-1 mark, and Pepperdine, which has a good lead in the West Coast Athletic Conference with an 8-1 standing. Only Utah of the "all but stage" group will be missed from the NCAA post-season play. The Utes are on NCAA probation and the Skyline with a 11-1 mark, and Utah State or Colorado State University, tied at 10-2.

Here's how the situation stacks up in the other eight major leagues:

Lafayette Leads

Mid-Atlantic — Lafayette leads at 9-1 with Temple and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia right behind with 7-1 marks.

Yankee — Massachusetts is 7-2 and Rhode Island 6-2.

Atlantic Coast — Wake Forest and Duke finished one-two in the regular season but now they all play again to determine the NCAA representative in a tournament starting Thursday at Raleigh, N.C. Wake Forest meets Virginia in an opening round game. Duke faces Maryland and well-regarded North Carolina State opposes Clemson.

Southern — West Virginia won the regular season title and is favored to occupy the NCAA berth in a tournament, involving all league members except William & Mary, starting Thursday at Richmond, Va. The Mountaineers' first round opponent will be Richmond.

Missouri Valley—Cincinnati has clinched at least a tie with Bradley for its fifth successive title. The Bearcats, who split two regular season games with Bradley, have finished their conference schedule. If Bradley beats St. Louis Saturday, there'll be a play-off on a neutral court. Cincinnati is the defending NCAA champion.

Saturday Showdown
Big Eight — Showdown comes Saturday at Manhattan, Kans., when ninth-ranked Colorado 10-0 and fourth-ranked Kansas State 9-1 clash. Each has three other games to play.

Southwest—A big jumble with Southern Methodist and Texas Tech both 9-3 after winning Saturday and Texas Aggies 8-4. All have two games left with the Aggies at Tech and SMU at Baylor Tuesday.

Southeastern — Mississippi (11-1) is the leader by a half-game over Kentucky (10-1) with Auburn right there with 10-2. Mississippi State and Auburn have two games each remaining. Kentucky three. Regardless of where they finish, the Kentucky Wildcats likely will be the conference's NCAA representative due to the custom against racially integrated athletics in Mississippi and Alabama.

With Ohio State's 102-79 romp over Illinois setting the pace, all members of the Associated Press' Top Ten came through unscathed Saturday. The victory was No. 21 for the Buckeyes.

Second Half Spurt Sparks Jack's Verdict

A 50-POINT second half Sunday earned the Pocono Jacks their second straight victory, 86-72 over the visiting Palmerton Sokols.

The unbeaten Jacks, lost an 11-point lead late in the first half but pulled well ahead in the third period, when they outscored the Sokols, who carried a 9-6 record into the game, 24-12. Bernie Cabey, former Toledo University performer and Tony Salerno, who co-captained East Stroudsburg State last year, were the top point producers for the Jacks.

Cabey Celebrates

Cabey, who was celebrating his first week of marriage Sunday, scored 25 points and Salerno had 20. Cabey did not have a point in the first period and had only eight at the half. But then the 6-4, 205-pounder found the range and connected on four straight long jumps as the second half got underway.

Ken Hendricks, who also co-captained East Stroudsburg State last year and is now the school's junior varsity court coach, carried the Jacks' first half scoring and rebounding load. Hendricks ended with 12 points, with 10 of them coming in the first half.

The 6-4 pivotman also did a fine defensive job on Sokol star Denny Roth, ex-Muhlenberg basketball star. Roth ended with 24 points but most of them were scored when Hendricks was resting on the bench. Roth had only two points in the first period and when Hendricks rested in the second frame, he dumped in 10.

The Pocono outside performers took turns getting points. Rick Carroll ended with 12. Lem Isom had seven and Stroud Union High coach Bob Wert had six.

Local Mat Team Out Of District

ALL wrestlers from Stroud Union and East Stroudsburg High School have been eliminated from the District 11 tournament, which moves into its final round next week.

Other area wrestlers in the tournament were Bill Yost, John Chama, Dutch Grimm and Dave Berry, Stroud Union; Rickie Heller, Dennis Petecovic, Don Sandt, Jack Hineine, Bill Petecovic, Mike Poortstra, Charlie Smith, Earl Metzgar, Bob Corby and Budd Stamm, all of East Stroudsburg.

The Daily Investor

Q. I am impressed by your warning that the average investor should not be "a trader," who buys and sells stocks. In the 10 years since my husband died I have increased the insurance money I received three times over by doing just that. I read your column and all the other financial news in the paper. I subscribe to a number of financial publications. I visit the public library and read the financial manuals and other literature there. I study stocks carefully, before I decide to buy or sell. But I don't "pick a good stock and stay with it," unless that stock shows continued signs of growth in value. When a stock I own rises sharply in price inside of a couple of years, I sell it and find some other stock which I feel will grow in value.

Does this make me a "trader?" A. Not really. A trader is someone who moves in and out of stocks constantly. You hang on to your stocks for a reasonable period of time and you sell when you have good reason.

Your method is an excellent method. By putting some time and effort into your selections, you have become a very successful investor. Your success over the past 10 years proves that.

Actually, it can be very smart to review your stock holdings from time to time, to sell those stocks which have had big increases in value and to put your money in some other stocks which will do better in the future.

This is in line with the old Wall Street theory that you buy stocks to make money; you don't marry them.

Nevertheless, I don't recommend this method for everyone. Most investors are better off if they buy good stocks and keep them, through thick and thin. Most can't follow their stocks, as you do.

Q. Does a brokerage firm get a bigger commission on the sale of stock, when it is acting as an underwriter, than it does in handling the purchase or sale of stock, through the regular method on a stock exchange? If the answer is yes, could this be the reason my broker always pushes certain stocks?

A. When a brokerage firm is acting as an underwriter in the sale of a new issue of stock or in the "secondary distribution" of a large block of already outstanding stock, the broker normally gets a much bigger commission than he does on a regular trading transaction.

Now, when you buy stock from an underwriter, you get the stock at a "net" price. No commission is added to your purchase price. But the seller (either the company which is issuing new stock or the big stockholders who are selling through a secondary distribution) normally pays a fat "discount" to the underwriters. That discount is usually much larger than a standard commission on the sale or purchase of stock.

Yes, it could be the reason certain brokers "push" certain stocks—the stocks they are underwriting. It happens all the time.

Q. I have a number of different common stocks, which don't pay very high dividends. I would like to change some of them to preferred stocks of the same companies, which pay higher dividends. Must I go through a broker?

A. You can't "exchange" them, through the companies, if that is what you have in mind. You will have to sell your common stocks and buy the preferred stocks. A broker is the natural choice to handle those chores.

Montgomery To Pick Candidate

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic leaders of suburban Montgomery County are scheduled to meet in Norristown Tuesday to pick a candidate for congress.

The Philadelphia Bulletin said Sunday one of those mentioned as a possible candidate is John B. Kelly Jr., 34-year-old former Olympic sculler. He is the son of the late Philadelphia builder and his sister is Princess Grace of Monaco.

Other possible candidates are reported to be Milton J. Shapp, board chairman of Jerrold Electronics Corporation, and Lee F. Driscoll Jr., chairman of the committee of 70, a Philadelphia civic group.

The Democratic candidate would oppose Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, who has indicated he will seek a second term.

Glenn's Flight Is A Long Step Along Space Trail

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr.'s magnificent voyage is a proper cause for some button-popping American pride.

It is a long step along the space trail pioneered by the Soviet Union. It restores some U.S. prestige lost by that Soviet head start, interpreted by many people as meaning the Soviet Union is or will become the most powerful nation in the cold war.

But the glee over Glenn can be overindulged.

Glenn's trip doesn't mean Americans will reach the moon very soon now.

Almost any day, the Soviets will take another step—perhaps repeating German Titov's journey, or orbiting a man for several days, or lofting two men around the world inside one spaceship.

But the Soviet Union is not yet ready to put men on the moon either.

Indeed, the first men to step out of a spacecraft reaching the moon could be future Titovs and Glenns, traveling together in an international cooperative program.

Both President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev have spoken of possible cooperation.

There are sound reasons for throwing in together for peaceful explorations of the space frontier.

For one thing, both nations must learn the same knowledge and develop very similar tech-

Community Betterment Is Topic Of Barrett League

BARRETT — Community betterment and civic co-operation were discussed at the Barrett Junior League meeting Thursday night at the Barrett YMCA. To enable the organization to gather pertinent facts on the Community Center, William Caruthers has been invited to be guest speaker at the April 5 meeting. He will discuss the "High Acres" property donated to the township by Miss Vick last fall.

Long range plans were begun for a talent show to be presented at the auditorium, The Inn, Buck Hill Falls, in co-operation with other civic and service organizations in the community. Also discussed was the possibility of Saturday night dances during the summer months featuring recording stars and with a disc jockey master of ceremonies.

A "telephone tree" was established to enable club members to be in contact with each other between meetings. Calls will be made to young women in the community between the ages of 18 and 35 reminding them of the March 8 meeting when Cornelia Stahler Gilling will present a monologue. During the business meeting which begins at 8:15 p.m., nominations will be taken from the floor for the officers of president, vice-president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary and treasurer. The by-laws will be voted on and additions or amendments made. Mrs. Samuel Wells, III will be present to offer information to the organization on Federation.

Mrs. Gwen Seese and Mrs. Wanda Vogt will be in charge of hospitality for the meeting. Young women interested in joining the organization may call for further information: Mrs. Gwen Seese, Ly 5-2769; Mrs. Jane Brush, Ly 5-2488; Mrs. Denise Bender, Ly 5-7653 or Mrs. Jane Williams, Ly 5-7221. The March 8 meeting is open to all interested young women in the community.

At the April 5 meeting, officers will be elected and William Caruthers will present the program. For the May 3 meeting, the newly elected officers will be installed and Barrett girls who are present seniors at the Pocono Mountain Joint Junior Senior High School will receive personal invitations to attend as guests of the club. Mrs. Judy Leister, Ly 5-2746 can answer questions in relation to these meetings.

Bond Sales $144,550 In Monroe Co.

SALES OF U. S. Savings Bonds during January were $43,800,000—a gain of 14.4 per cent over January a year ago.

It was the first time in four years that sales for a single month passed the $43,000,000 figure.

For Monroe county, cash sales of Series E and H savings bonds were $144,550.

At the national level, savings bond sales during January were up 4.4 per cent. The cash value of outstanding E and H bonds set another high record of $44,610 million, up $125 million since January 1, 1962.

The highlight of the month for the bond program was a top-level briefing for some 800 leading executives in Washington on January 19, at which President Kennedy and Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon announced a Freedom Bond Drive to take place in May and June to stimulate extra bond purchases.

Follow-up meetings of volunteers in the savings bonds program at area and county level are taking place throughout Pennsylvania.

Rockwell Delays Latest Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the American Nazi party, postponed a speech he was scheduled to make outside the federal court-house in Lewisburg, Pa., Sunday.

A spokesman said Saturday that bad weather made traveling by automobile difficult. He said Rockwell will set another date for the speech.

Rockwell spoke briefly on the streets in Lewisburg earlier this month after the Bucknell University student forum withdrew a speaking invitation. At that time he said he would return.

Harold B. Croasdale, Mrs. Nelson Lightner, Sr., Mrs. Siptröh, assisted by Mrs. Buzzard, served refreshments.
